GRANT FUNDING

1L60MH131170-01, Bauer (PI) – $22,952

National Institute of Mental Health

07/01/2022-06/30/2024

Culturally Tailored Assessment and Promotion of Mental Health among Black Young Adults

Major goals: 1) Using focus groups, qualitatively assess TPB-related attitudes, beliefs, and norms toward mental health care among young Black women who have experienced trauma; 2) To expand development of TPB-guided instrument to include items relevant for young Black women and pilot the measure among this group for acceptability, comprehension, and face validity; 3) To implement the refined instrument, with other quantitative measures, among a larger sample of young Black adults to establish psychometric properties and explore culturally specific impacts on mental health; and 4) Begin to conceptualize and plan culturally tailored intervention strategies and resources that promote mental health among young Black adults.

Role: PI

Black Bodies, Black Health Seed Grant, Bauer (PI) – $15,000

Rutgers University

03/17/2022-12/31/2022

Piloting and Refining a Cultural Humility Toolkit among Mental Health Service Providers

Major goals: This project aims to 1) Qualitatively assess the experiences of providers from mental health agencies in the New Jersey area (i.e., knowledge and current practices related to cultural humility, ongoing needs for skill development), 2) Qualitatively assess the experiences of underrepresented and minoritized people who utilized mental health services (i.e., how they perceived their cultural identity was or was not considered in the context of assessment and treatment), and 3) Pilot the newly developed toolkit among five mental health service provider agencies based in New Jersey, using mixed methods to assess feasibility of use, acceptability of materials, and preliminary effectiveness of the toolkit resources.

Role: PI

IDEA Innovation Grant Program, Bauer (PI) – $2,500

Rutgers University

11/15/2021-5/1/2022

Developing a Cultural Humility Toolkit for Mental Health Service Providers

Major goal: To develop an accessible and broadly applicable resource toolkit for mental health providers that is designed to promote cultural humility, including 1) self-awareness of their own and their patients' respective cultural backgrounds, 2) understanding of how these factors may impact treatment, and 3) practical skill- building strategies to discuss and address these factors with patients.

Exploring Mental Health Screening and Linkage to Care Among Young African American Men
 Major Goals: Use focus groups to: 1) Explore Theory of Planned Behavior (TPB)-related beliefs and intentions, facilitators/barriers, and potential intervention strategies regarding receipt of mental health screening with young urban AA men who have experienced trauma, 2) Examine TPB constructs, intentions, and other potential psychosocial mediators (e.g., mental health stigma, coping mechanisms, masculinity, discrimination) related to seeking mental health screening, and 3) Disseminate study results to community stakeholders from relevant community sectors (e.g., colleges/universities, barbershops, churches, mental health, criminal justice), and collect input on focus group/survey findings and potential intervention strategies.

Role: PIUMKC School of Graduate Studies, Booker (PI) – $7,500

University of Missouri-Kansas City, School of Graduate Studies Research Award Program

8/6/2018 – 5/15/2019

Exploring Mental Health Screening and Linkage to Care Among Young African American Men
 Major goals: 1) Develop a survey guided by the Theory of Planned Behavior, based on qualitative data previously obtained from focus groups and individual interviews; 2) Conduct a small pilot study to assess reliability, acceptability, and validity of this new instrument; and 3) Refine the survey based on initial responses, and administer to a larger sample to quantitatively examine beliefs, attitudes, norms, and intentions to seek mental health screening and care among young African American men.

Role: PIHealth Care Foundation of Greater Kansas City, Williams (PI) – $60,000

Calvary Temple Baptist Church

Assessing Pathways Between Structural Racism and Substance Use Trajectories Among Diverse Black Communities

Major goals: To use a community-based participatory research approach to study the complex impacts of structural racism on substance use trajectories among Black adults. This longitudinal study will examine pathways between forms of structural racism, culturally relevant risk and protective factors, and substance use trajectories among Black adults, with a focus on identifying processes underlying substance use trajectories and targets that are most critically in need of antiracist policy intervention.

7/1/2023 – 6/30/2028

Building a Community-Based Mental Health Literacy Intervention for Black Young Adults

Major goals: 1) Characterize core content for promoting trauma and substance use related mental health literacy (MHL) among young Black adults after trauma and co-produce tailored MHL intervention with community partners, 2) Advance understanding of best practices for successful promotion of MHL knowledge and beliefs regarding trauma and substance use among young Black adults after trauma by piloting the intervention, and 3) Conceptualize areas to refine the intervention for further impact through post-study focus groups.
